

CALIFORNIA PARENTS & VOTERS SHARE CONCERNS about REOPENING SCHOOLS DURING COVID-19

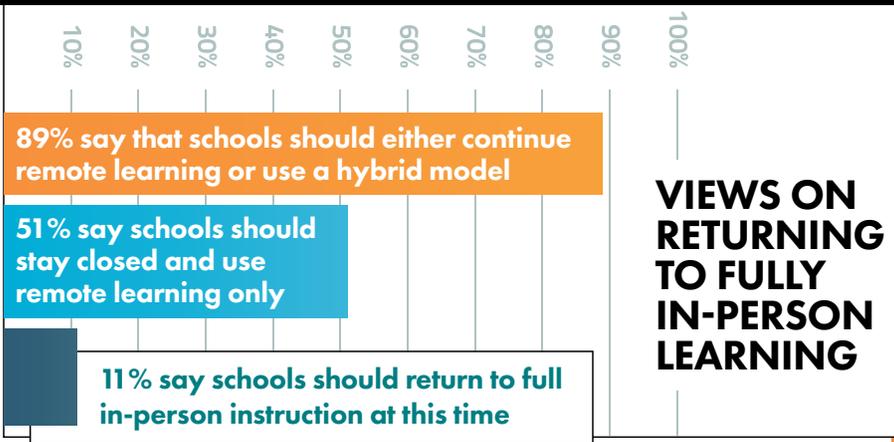

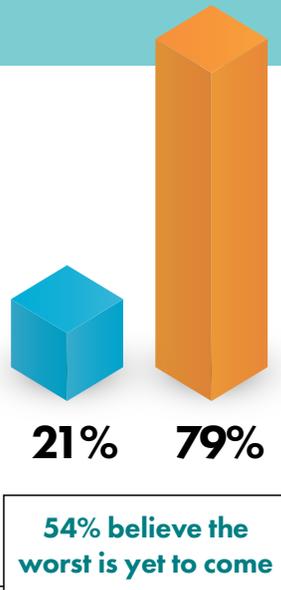

A new statewide poll reveals California parents and voters are most concerned for the health of students, educators, and families in reopening public schools for in-person instruction. Vast majorities say the spread of COVID-19 is still a serious problem and fear the worst of the virus is yet to come. The poll was conducted for CTA in September 2020, by Hart Research Associates.

Read the full report at www.cta.org/covid19

VIEWS ON COVID-19 IN CALIFORNIA

79% think the coronavirus is still a serious problem

21% believe it is "pretty well under control"

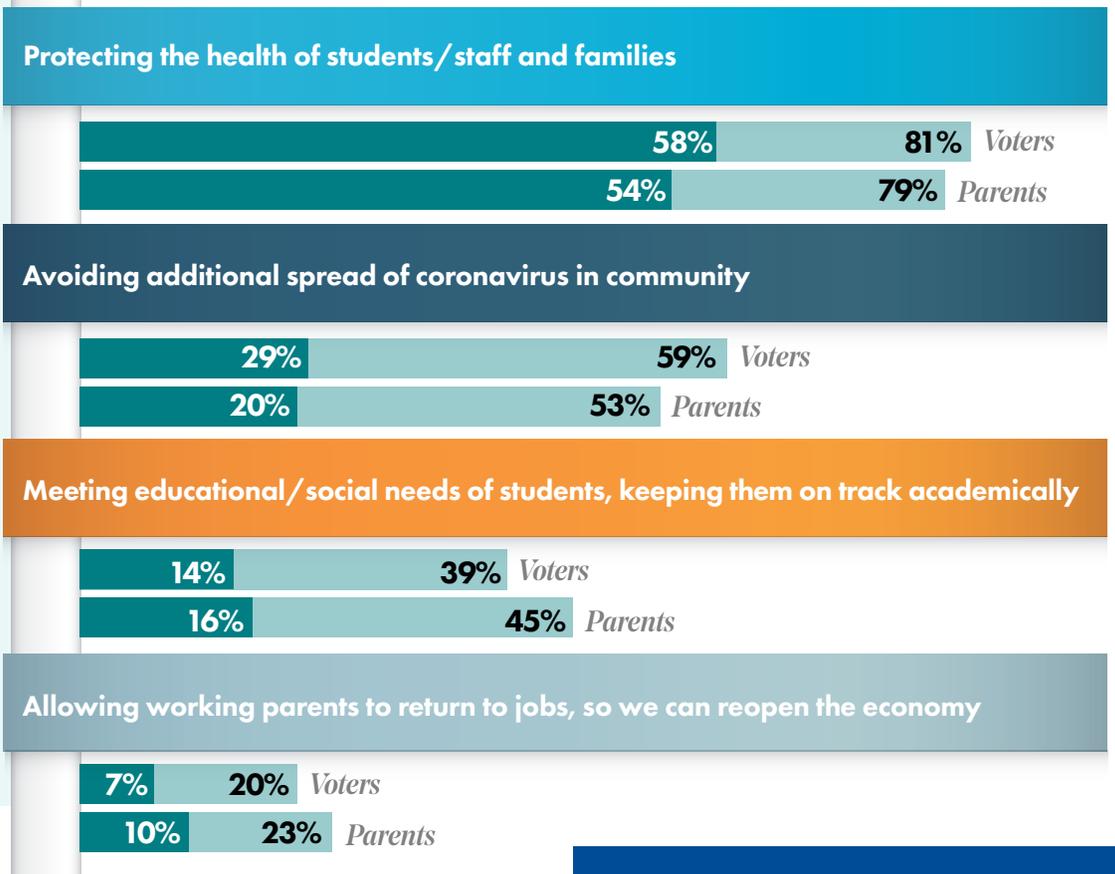

VIEWS ON TRUSTED SOURCES

When it comes to decisions on whether, how, and when schools should open, parents and voters trust local teachers second only to Dr. Anthony Fauci.

VIEWS ON SAFETY BEING THE DRIVING FACTOR IN RETURNING TO SCHOOLS

Which should be the biggest factors in whether, how, when your local public schools should reopen?

Biggest factor
Top Two Factors

80 VIEWS ON ADDITIONAL FUNDING
80% of voters and 79% of parents say more money needs to be invested in schools to deal with the crisis.

79

VIEWS ON TESTING & TRACING
88% support educators' demand for testing and contact tracing.

88

VIEWS ON HOW WELL AT-HOME INSTRUCTION HAS WORKED FOR YOU

48% Very/fairly well
31% Okay
21% Not well